BREED THEATER.

The Bandit's Wife, Thrilling Western Story.

This powerful western dramatic subject is one of the most intensely interesting film stories that the Breed has ever offered to its patrons and tells a story that is in a class by itself and is decidedly unique. A reward of $2,000 has been offered for the capture of two cowboy thieves named Sweeney and Harding, and as the sheriff is close upon their tracks Sweeney decides to flee the country and takes Harding to his secluded shack in the woods, where Sweeney's wife and Harding's secret love, decide to turn state's evidence and give themselves up with the promise to present Sweeney, dead or alive, for the sum of $2,000 and his freedom. This is promised and Harding arranges with Sweeney's wife to inform him when her husband crosses the boundary and when the secret note is left in the tree trunk Sweeney, who is in hiding, reads it and adds "He will wear a dress," and at the first sight of Mrs. Sweeney, presuming it is the pal of his, fires and kills her. There is great remorse on Harding's part and much gloating on Sweeney's part and the picture leaves Harding protesting over the form of the woman whom he hoped to see from a villainous paramour. A beautiful fantastic picture by the Biograph company entitled "That's What the Daisies Said" is another feature and Miss Hampton will sing a new military song and picture ballad.

A FATHER AT 72.

Eleventh Child Born to the Rev. Benjamin A. Dean, Formerly of Woodstock.

On July 21 a child, described as "a good sized baby girl," was born at Center, Neb. to the Rev. Benjamin A. Dean and Mrs. Dean, says the Hartford Courant. The father is a Congregationalist clergyman, who is well known in this state. The new arrival is his eleventh child and the third of his second wife. Both mother and daughter were doing well at last accounts. Mr. Dean, who was born in 1838, has six grandchildren. He married his first wife in 1867 at the Palmer place, Woodstock, where he has recently lived. In 1905 he married his second wife, who aided him in his pastorate at East Hartford. For five years Mr. Dean preached in Colebrook, where his first wife died in 1899.

SHARP TWIST SAVES AUTO.
Norwich Chauffeur's Quick Action Prevents Collision With Train at Moosup.

A quick turn of the steering wheel that tore one of the front wheels from its axle was all that saved an auto containing three persons from being struck by a train at Moosup Friday. The machine, which came from Norwich, was proceeding through the town and was just going to cross the track at French's crossing near the railroad station when a train from Providence came along.

The engineer of the train put on his air and did all in his power to stop the train, but the chauffeur's presence of
